

Internet Safety in the Workplace: A Human Rights Perspective

Rosslyn Noonan
Chief Human Rights Commissioner

Abstract

Discussions of internet safety in the workplace give rise to a range of human rights concerns, some of them highly complex. Numerous factors must be balanced, from preventing sexual harassment to upholding the right to privacy.

This paper traverses a number of issues including:

- Internet Safety and Child Pornography
- Racial Disharmony
- Censorship Issues
- Internet Safety and Sexual Harassment
- Balancing Employers' Interests and Employees' Rights
- Processes to be followed when Limiting Rights

It aims to give participants a human rights practitioner's view on how problems may be prevented, or if necessary resolved, without giving rise to further difficulties.
